Billing Period Comparison -

A new chart compares information from this billing period to the previous billing period as well as to the corresponding billing period from the previous year:

- Average High Temperature -Weather information based on your zip code.
- Average Low Temperature -Weather information based on your zip code.
- Billing Days The number of days in your billing cycle.
- Average Daily Usage (kWh) Your average daily energy usage in kilowatt-hours.
- Total kWh Usage Your total amount of energy usage, in kilowatt-hours.
- Demand (kW) | For Information Only - Your demand, or highest hourly usage during on-peak hours, in kilowatts. This line will begin displaying in summer 2018. The readings are for information only. You will continue to be billed based on your current pricing plan.

2 Ways to Save

A colorful graphic will provide information about time-of-use and demand-based pricing plans, including the current time-of-use hours, to customers not currently on those plans.

Customers on those plans will see related usage information.

SECOND PAGE:

Continuing Messages Bill messages that did not fit on the front page will appear at the top of the second page.

Colored Subheads

Subheads under Charges will appear in blue for emphasis and ease of skimming.

Regulatory Information

Regulatory and rate-specific messages will be highlighted in orange above the Meter Information section.

Meter Information

The Meter Information section will appear underneath the Charges section.

Beginning in summer 2018, all customers will begin seeing their on- and off-peak usage in kilowatt-hours (KWH) and their on- and off-peak demand in kilowatts (KW). For customers who aren't using a time-of-use or demand-based pricing plan, this data is for informational purposes only.

From left to right:

- Meter Your meter number.
- Unit of Measure KWH refers to kilowatt-hours, and KW refers to kilowatts.
- Next Read Date Your next meter reading date.
- Reading The reading from your meter.
- Usage Measured consumption during the billing period.
